Dear Sir/Madam,

Next month I will be relocating to Boston, where I grew up, on account of my wife accepting a job in the city. I have given notice to my current employer and am actively seeking employment in what will soon again be my hometown.

I am very interested in the position you have advertised in administration. I have over five years of experience working in this industry and I am confident that my professional skills and capabilities would allow me to make a positive contribution to your team. In addition to the achievements listed on my CV, I would like to highlight that I am professionally known for my friendly demeanor towards both clients and colleagues, my ability to work in a team environment, and my attention to detail. I believe these strengths would be valuable assets in this job.

My references are available on request. Please do not hesitate to contact me for further information, and thank you for your consideration.

Yours faithfully,
